This manual is written for the people who sell for the 561 Group's land contracts business. It is not for resale or redistribution outside the Group.
First edition, September 2026.

Who this book is for

You have agreed to find sellers or buyers for the 561 Group, probably on commission, probably working your own hours with your own phone. You may never have worked in real estate. This book assumes nothing about what you know except that you can hold a conversation and keep notes.

By the end of it you will know what the business buys and sells, who pays for what, what to say on a call and why, which rules you work under and where they come from, how to record your work so that it pays you, and how to tell from your own numbers whether you are getting better.

How this book is organized

The book follows a deal from the first search to the money at closing.

- Chapter 1 says what the business does and why each party says yes.
- Chapter 2 describes the kinds of property we contract and who buys each.
- Chapter 3 covers buyers first: the buy-box call, which decides every other call you make.
- Chapter 4 teaches you to read a lead before you dial.
- Chapters 5 and 6 are the seller call and its objections.
- Chapter 7 covers letters, for owners you cannot reach by phone and for land worked by mail.
- Chapters 8 and 9 follow a yes to a signed contract, then the contract to an assignment and a closing.

- Chapter 10 is the rules: licensing, disclosure, calling hours and how we treat people.
- Chapter 11 shows you how to do all of this in the metroplex, the 561 Group's operations world, where your office gives you your commands.
- Chapter 12 is your day and your week, as a plan of actions.
- Chapter 13 is the numbers: what a deal pays, what calling yields, and how to read your own funnel.
- Chapter 14 covers the second lines of work: county auctions, unclaimed surplus, and estates.
- A glossary and an appendix of scripts, outcome codes and stage reasons close the book.

The examples are real parcels from the county records, pulled on 2026-09-26, with the owners' names left out. The scripts are the ones we use.

How to use it

Read chapters 1 through 6 before your first call. Keep the appendix open while you dial. Read chapter 10 twice.

When something in this book does not match what happens on your calls, the book is wrong. Tell the acquisitions lead, and the next edition will say what actually works. A lost deal is how the procedure gets better.

Chapter 1

What we do

1.1 The business in one paragraph

We find property whose owner would rather have a quick, certain sale than keep it: a vacant lot inherited by someone three states away, forty acres of forest nobody has walked in twenty years, a rental house a landlord is tired of. We agree with the owner on a price and sign a purchase agreement that names us as the buyer "or assigns". We then sell our right to buy, the contract, to a builder or investor who wants the property, for a fee. Everyone closes at a title company: the owner receives the agreed price, the new buyer receives the property, and we receive the fee. We never have to own the property ourselves, though we can when a deal calls for it.

The name for this is contract assignment. People in the trade call it wholesaling. This book calls it what it is.

1.2 Who pays whom

A deal has four parties and one closing.

party	what they give	what they get the owner (seller)	the property	the agreed price, paid at closing, with no commission and no showings
the buyer (assignee)	the price plus our fee	a property that fits what they build or hold, found and put under contract for them
the 561 Group	earnest money and the work of finding, contracting and closing	the assignment fee
you	the calls that find the seller or the buyer	your share of the fee, under your agreement

The fee is the difference between what the buyer pays and what the owner receives. It is paid by the buyer, through the title company, at closing. The owner's price does not change because of it, and the owner is told in writing, before signing, that we may assign the agreement for a fee (chapter 10).

1.3 A deal, start to finish, with real numbers

This is the first lead on the Duluth list on 2026-09-26.

- The property: a half-acre of unimproved residential land in the Bay View Heights plat. At Duluth's standard lot of 25 by 125 feet, it holds about six building lots.
- The owner: lives in Florida. The county shows $1,579 in unpaid taxes and projects the lot will forfeit in 2026.
- The county's estimate: $14,400 for the land.
- The buyer side: a Duluth builder has told us they pay up to $12,000 for a buildable lot of this size in this part of town. That is the builder's buy box (chapter 3).

The numbers then run like this.

1. Our offer ceiling is the builder's price less the fee we need: $12,000 less $3,000 is $9,000. The county-estimate ceiling (70% of $14,400, $10,100) is higher, so the builder's price sets the limit.
2. You reach the owner. They say they would take $9,000. You set an offer call.
3. The acquisitions lead offers $8,000 and settles there. The owner signs the purchase agreement and the disclosure letter. We deposit $300 of earnest money with a Duluth title company.
4. We send the builder the contract. They sign the assignment at $12,000 and pay a deposit.
5. At closing, the builder pays $12,000. The owner receives $8,000, less the $1,579 in back taxes the title company pays to the county. We receive $4,000.
6. At a 40% caller share, you receive $1,600 and the Group $2,400.

The owner got a sale they could not arrange from Florida, without an agent. The builder got a lot without searching for it. You got paid for two phone calls that mattered and the hundred that led to them.

1.4 Why owners say yes

Owners do not sell to us because they are cornered. The 561 Group's own research on this business says it plainly: sellers trade price for speed and certainty all the time, for reasons that have nothing to do with hardship. An heir who will never manage land a thousand miles away. A landlord ready to be done with a tired rental. Someone relocating on a deadline. Someone who will not pay for repairs or sit through showings. A fast, certain sale with no commission is a real service, and it has a real price.

What makes a good lead is a logistical reason to sell: distance, time, inheritance, a property the owner does not use. Chapter 4 shows how the lead list finds those reasons in the county's records.

1.5 Why buyers pay

Builders and investors pay the fee because finding property is expensive. A builder who wants three lots in one neighborhood would have to read the county's records, find the owners, reach them, and negotiate each one. We do that across every parcel in the county at once, and bring them a contract that already fits their price. The fee is the builder's search cost, paid only when the search succeeds.

This is why the business works buyers first. We learn what buyers want before we call a single owner, and we only call owners whose property a buyer already wants.

1.6 Who you work for

The 561 Group is a private company. It is the working structure of Pheží Ocháğe, a small Lakota kinship group (a tiyóšpaye) headed by the Group's founder, emsenn. The Group exists to serve the kinship, not the other way around. What the Group earns, including from this business, goes home to it.

You do not need to know more than that to do this work well. You should know that it is true, because you may be asked, and because it is part of why the Group insists on dealing honestly: the business is meant to last as long as the people it serves.

Chapter 2

The kinds of property

Every parcel on your lists is read as one kind of property. The kind decides who will buy it, how we price the offer, and what you say on the call. You filter your call queue by kind (`kinds=infill-lot`, for example).

2.1 Infill lot

Vacant residential land inside a city, big enough to build on. In Duluth, a standard lot is 25 by 125 feet; many older plats are full of them, and many sit empty because their owners live elsewhere.

- Who buys: home builders, nonprofit housing developers, people who want to build their own house.
- How we price: the builder's top price less our fee, never above 70% of the county's land estimate. The first offer usually opens near half the estimate.
- What matters to the buyer: the neighborhood, how many standard lots the parcel holds, whether water and sewer are at the street, and whether it is flat enough to build on.

Duluth is loosening its zoning to allow narrower lots and more kinds of housing, so more of these lots become buildable each year. The city also gives some tax-forfeited lots to builders for free, so a lot we sell must be better placed, bigger, already served, or available sooner than what the city offers. Ask the builder which (chapter 3).

2.2 Underbuilt site

Commercial or industrial land of a quarter acre or more where the buildings are worth little compared with the land: gravel lots, surface parking, storage yards. On 2026-09-26, Duluth had 847 of them on our list.

- Who buys: developers of larger projects, apartment builders, businesses expanding.
- How we price: like lots, from the buyer's price down. Fees are larger because the land is worth more.

- Example: ten acres of commercial land on a Duluth overlook, owned by a company in New York, with $26,251 in unpaid taxes and a projected forfeiture in 2029. The county values the land at $318,800.

2.3 Rural acreage

Vacant land outside cities, most often forest. The northern counties are full of it: Lake County alone had 5,426 rural parcels on our list.

- Who buys: hunters, people who want a cabin site, neighbors expanding, and land investors who resell land on payment plans.
- How we price: the way land investors price, at a fifth to a half of the county's value, because the buyers pay that way and the land sells slowly.
- Example: forty acres of rural vacant land in Lake County, held by a trust whose trustee lives in Tennessee, never recorded as sold. The county values it at $183,100. The first offer opens at $45,800.
- How it is worked: mostly by mail, with a blind offer (chapter 7), and by calling the owners who answer.

2.4 Seasonal parcel

Lake and cabin land the county classes as seasonal recreational property. It is often on or near water, which buyers pay for.

- Who buys: cabin buyers and cabin builders.
- Example: 38 acres of seasonal recreational land in a Lake County township, held by an estate, the owner of record in Illinois, county value $134,700.

2.5 House the owner does not live in

A house or small rental (one to four units) whose owner has told the county it is not their homestead. In Minneapolis there were 11,762 of them on our list.

- Who buys: landlords and renovators.
- How we price: from the county's total estimate, land and building, at half to 70%, and only after someone has seen the inside. Repairs decide the price, and the county does not know them.
- Example: a single-family house in Proctor, not the owner's homestead, owned since 2005 by someone living elsewhere in Minnesota, with $8,455 in unpaid taxes. The county values it at $181,800.

- What is different: a house has tenants, leases, and a condition. A residential seller must give the buyer a written disclosure of known problems before signing (Minnesota Statutes 513.55), and the purchase agreement says so.

2.6 Forfeited parcel

Land whose owner did not pay taxes long enough that the state took title. Since July 2024, Minnesota requires the county to sell every forfeited parcel at a public auction, usually online, within six months. Duluth had 3,785 forfeited parcels in the county's records on 2026-09-26.

You never call anyone about these, because no private owner can sell them. They are a second supply line: the acquisitions lead watches the county's auction lists and matches them to buyers (chapter 14).

2.7 A note on counties

The lists come from the county's own parcel records. St. Louis County's records are the richest we have: they show unpaid taxes and the year a parcel is projected to forfeit. Other counties come from the state's compiled parcel records, which show value, size, class and ownership but not unpaid taxes. Some counties write their classes as numbers rather than names. For those, the list can tell vacant land by its size and place, but cannot yet tell a house from a business.

Chapter 3

Buyers first

The most valuable call you make is to a buyer. One builder who tells you where they build, what they pay and how fast they close tells you which of a thousand owners are worth calling and what the Group can offer each of them. The business plan's first milestone is twenty recorded buy boxes, before most seller calling starts.

3.1 What a buy box is

A buy box is a buyer's standing description of what they will buy. You record it with `land-buy-box-record`. It has these parts:

part	what to ask	how it is recorded markets	"Which towns or counties?"	`markets=duluth,hermantown`
kinds	"Lots, larger sites, houses, land?"	`kinds=infill-lot`
areas	"Which neighborhoods, plats or ZIP codes?"	`areas="Lakeside,Lester Park,55804"` size	"How many lots, how many acres, how wide?"	`minStandardLots=1 maxAcres=2`
price	"What do you pay for a buildable lot there?"	`maxPrice=12000`
utilities	"Do you need water and sewer at the street?"	`utilitiesRequired=true` speed	"How fast can you close? Cash or financed?"	`closeDays=30 cash=true`
how to send	"Email, text or call?"	`sendVia=email email=...`

Once recorded, the buy box goes to work by itself. Every parcel that fits it is marked with the buyer's name in the lead list, and the offer ceiling on those parcels drops to the buyer's price less the Group's fee.

3.2 Who to call

`land-buyers` lists two groups.

1. Recorded buyers, with their buy boxes and how many parcels each one matches.
2. Candidates: owners who already hold several vacant residential lots in a market, or bought two or more in the last three years. These are the builders and traders the county records reveal.

Start with the names you already know are building: in Duluth, Dirt, Inc. and One Roof Community Housing, then the companies at the top of the candidate list. Add builders you find in the city's permits, in the news, and on job-site signs. For houses, add the landlords and renovators who show up as candidates in Minneapolis, Saint Paul and Duluth. For rural land, add the land investors who mail offers in the northern counties; their letters name them.

A candidate is sometimes not a buyer at all: a company holding lots around its own plant, or a family holding lots next to the family house. The call finds out. Log `not interested` and move on.

3.3 The builder call

> Hi, is this [name / company]? This is [your name] with the 561 Group. We find land in [market], mostly from owners who live out of town, and put it under contract for builders. I see you've been buying lots around [area]. Are you still looking?

If yes, ask the buy-box questions in the table above, in any order the conversation allows. Then:

> Here's how it works on our side. When a lot that fits comes under contract, you hear about it first, at a price that already fits what you just told me. You take our contract, close at a title company, and pay our fee there. If it isn't a fit, you just say no. Can I send you a one-page summary of that?

Send the buyer introduction the same day (`land-document-draft template=buyer-introduction`), and log the call.

3.4 What to say about the city's free lots

Duluth's builders can get some tax-forfeited lots from the city at no cost, and the city's Housing Trust Fund lends gap and short-term construction money for infill, rehabilitation and conversion housing. Both are good for builders, and both matter to you.

- The free lots are a competitor. Ask: "What do the city's lots not give you?" The answer (location, size, utilities, timing) belongs in the buy box.
- The trust fund is a help. A builder who can finance construction through it can buy more lots. Mention it to builders who do not know it.

3.5 Investors who buy land and houses

Rural land and houses are bought by investors more than by builders. The call is the same, with different questions:

- For land: "Which counties? What size parcels? Do you need road access or lake frontage? What do you pay per acre?"
- For houses: "Which neighborhoods? Rentals or renovations? What condition will you take? What's your price as a share of what it'll be worth fixed up?"

3.6 Keeping buy boxes true

A buy box goes stale. Call each buyer every month or two and ask what changed. Record a new buy box with any change; the newest one is the one used. If a buyer stops buying, record `retired=true`.

Buyers who never take a deal we send tell us something too. Ask why, and put the answer in the buy box's notes.

Chapter 4

Reading a lead

Before every call, read the lead (`land-lead parcel=...`). It takes thirty seconds and tells you what to say.

4.1 The fields

field	what it tells you
`kind`	infill lot, underbuilt site, seasonal, rural acreage, house, forfeited
`owner`, `mailing`	who to ask for, and where they live
`ownerLives`	local, elsewhere in Minnesota, out of state, or unknown
`ownerKind`	a person, a company, or an estate, heirs or trust
`lot`, `place`	where the property is: street address, or plat, lot and block
`acres`, `standardLots`	size, and how many standard lots it holds in that market
`class`	how the county classes it
`landEstimate`, `buildingEstimate`	the county's values
`openOffer`, `maxOffer`	where the Group would start and where it stops (for you, never for the owner)
`backTaxes`, `forfeitYear`	unpaid taxes, and the year the county projects the property will forfeit
`lastSaleYear`	when it last sold; blank means no recorded sale
`buyers`	the buyers whose buy boxes it fits
`interest`	what the owner has told us so far (below)
`stage`	where the deal is (chapter 8)
`why`	the reasons it scored, in plain words
`contactHistory`	every earlier call, letter and note

4.2 The score, and what `why` says

Leads are sorted by a score. Each reason adds or subtracts points, and `why` lists the reasons so you can open the conversation with them.

- The kind of property (lots score highest, then seasonal land, sites and houses, then rural acreage).
- Room to build: more standard lots on a lot, more acres on rural land, and a named lake.
- The owner lives away: out of state scores more than elsewhere in Minnesota.
- Unpaid taxes, and a forfeiture year that is close.
- The owner is an estate, heirs or a trust.
- The owner has held it fifteen years or more, or it has no recorded sale.
- It scores less when the owner is a company (companies sell, but slower and through more people) and when the county values the land under $1,000.

Every one of those is a logistical reason: distance, inheritance, time, a property nobody uses. None of them means the owner is in trouble, and you should never talk as if it does.

4.3 Interest: four readings

Every call you log tells something about whether the owner will sell to us. “Interested”, “callback” and “offer call set” tell for. “Not interested” and “remove” tell against. “No answer”, “voicemail”, “wrong number” and “letter sent” tell nothing. The lead reads all of it at once as one of four answers:

interest	means	what you do
`unknown`	never reached, or nothing told either way	call
`held`	they said yes to talking price	set the offer call if not set
`denied`	they said no	leave them be; they drop out of your queue
`contested`	they said yes once and no once	call to settle it; the queue holds them out until a person resolves it

The four readings come from the Group’s own logic for evidence: a question can have evidence for, against, both, or neither, and the system never throws either side away. For you it simply means the list remembers every answer and never pretends a mixed answer is a clean one.

4.4 The call queue

`land-call-queue` puts the right lead in front of you.

1. Callbacks you promised, now due, come first.
2. Then owners of parcels that fit a buyer, not reached in the last two weeks, highest score first.
3. One row per owner: if an owner holds several parcels, you see all of them on one call.
4. Owners who said no, owners with mixed answers, and parcels already under contract are left out.

Narrow it with `market=` and `kinds=`. Add `includeUnmatched=true` only when the matched leads are used up.

`land-parcels-find` is the full search, with every filter: size, value, class, where the owner lives, owner kind, unpaid taxes, forfeiture year, last sale, place name, buyer, interest and stage.

Chapter 5

The seller call

A seller call has one goal: find out whether the owner would sell, and if so, what number would make it worth doing, then set a time for the acquisitions lead to make an offer. You do not make offers. You do not quote a price. You learn what the owner wants and hand it on.

5.1 The shape of every call

1. Say who you are and why you are calling. Your name, the 561 Group, the property.
2. Confirm they own it. Many numbers are wrong or old.
3. Ask if they would consider an offer.
4. If yes, learn the property and the owner's number. Let them name the number first, and write it down exactly.
5. Set the offer call with a day and time, and log it.
6. If no, thank them, ask whether to take them off the list, and log it.

5.2 The opening

> Hi, is this [first name]? This is [your name] with the 561 Group. I'm calling about your property in [place], the [lot / land / house] at [street, or plat and block]. Do you still own that?

If yes:

> We buy property there directly from owners, and I wanted to ask whether you'd consider an offer on it. We close at a local title company, with no agent and no commission.

5.3 When they are open to it

Ask what you need for a real offer. Keep it a conversation, not a form.

- How did you come to own it? How long have you had it?

- Have you been out to see it? Anything I should know: access, wetland, a neighbor using it, a well or septic system?
- Is anyone else on the title with you?
- If we could close in the next 30 to 60 days, what number would make this worth doing for you?

When they name a number, repeat it back and write it down. If they will not name one:

> That's fair. Would it help if our offer lead called you with a number, and you can tell them what you think of it?

Then set the call:

> Thanks. I'll pass this to [the acquisitions lead], and they'll call you with an offer. What's a good time, [day] or [day]?

Log `offer call set` with the asking price, the time, and your notes.

5.4 By kind of property

An infill lot or a site. Builders want to know about access, slope, utilities and whether a neighbor uses it. Ask. If the owner does not know, say so in the notes; the builder will look.

Rural acreage or seasonal land. Owners of forest land often have not seen it in years. Ask about road access, whether it is landlocked, whether anyone hunts it, and whether there is any cabin, shed or trailer on it. Many of these owners reach you by answering a letter (chapter 7), so they have already seen a number; start from it:

> Thanks for calling back about our letter on your land in [county]. Were you thinking about the offer, or would you like to talk about the price?

A house the owner does not live in. Ask about tenants and leases, the condition (roof, furnace, water heater, foundation), what they would want to fix and what they would not, and whether they would allow a walk-through. A house is priced only after someone sees it, so the offer call becomes a visit:

> Our offer lead would want to see it before making a number. Would the tenant allow a walk-through if we give them notice?

An estate, heirs or a trust. Ask who handles the property now:

> Are you the one handling the property for the family, or is there someone else I should talk with?

A personal representative or trustee signs for the estate or trust. If nobody has been appointed, or the family has never probated the estate, the sale cannot close until someone can sign. Say so plainly, log it, and note `heir search` in your notes: the Group's heir search business does exactly that work, and the acquisitions lead may refer the family to it (chapter 14).

5.5 Unpaid taxes and forfeiture

If `backTaxes` is more than zero:

> I see the county shows some unpaid taxes on it. That's common, and they get paid at closing out of the sale, so nothing comes out of your pocket up front.

If `forfeitYear` is this year or next, say what the county's records say, and say it accurately:

> The county's records also show the property could forfeit in [year] if the taxes aren't caught up. If that happens, the county auctions it, and you'd need to file a claim afterward to get anything above what's owed. Selling now means you choose the price and get paid at closing.

That is how Minnesota law works since July 2024: after forfeiture, the county must auction the property, and the former owner may claim what the auction brings above the taxes and costs, by filing a form within six months of the county's notice. Do not tell an owner they will "lose everything". It is not true, and we do not say things that are not true.

5.6 Voicemail

> Hi [first name], this is [your name] with the 561 Group. I'm calling about your property in [place], near [street or plat]. We buy property there and I wanted to see if you'd consider an offer. You can reach me at [number]. Thanks.

5.7 Text

Only to a number that belongs to the owner, sent by you, one at a time:

> Hi [first name], this is [your name] with the 561 Group. I'm interested in buying your property in [place] ([street or plat]). Would you consider an offer?

5.8 What to log after every dial

Log every dial, even the ones nobody answers (`land-contact-log`):

- `party=owner parcel=...`
- `outcome=` one of `no answer`, `voicemail`, `wrong number`, `not owner`, `callback`, `interested`, `offer call set`, `not interested`, `remove`
- `askingPrice=` when they named one
- `callbackAt=` when you promised to call back (an ISO date and time, like `2026-10-02T15:00`)
- `notes="..."` for anything the next person should know

Your share of a deal depends on the log: a deal is yours when you first reached the owner who later signs and logged it before the offer call.

Chapter 6

Objections

An objection is information. The owner is telling you what matters to them. Answer it truthfully, learn from it, and never argue.

they say	you say
“How did you get my number?”	“Property ownership is public record at the county, and we look up owners of property we’re interested in.”
“It’s worth more than that.” (before any number)	“Could be. What do you think it’s worth? I’ll pass your number along exactly as you say it.”
“Your letter’s number is too low.”	“That’s why I’m glad you called. What number would work for you? I’ll take it to our offer lead.”
“I want to keep it for my kids.”	“Understood. Is that still the plan, or has it been sitting? Either way, can I check back in six months?” Log `callback` with the date.
“Send me something in writing.”	“Happy to. Our offer lead will call with a number and then send it in writing, with a letter that explains the agreement in plain words. What’s the best email or address?”
“I’m not interested.”	“No problem, thank you for your time. Would you like me to take you off our list?” Log `not interested` or `remove`.
“Are you a realtor?”	“No. We buy property directly. There’s no agent and no commission.”

they say	you say
“Why do you want it?”	For a lot: “Builders are looking for lots there, and yours could have a house on it.” For land: “We buy land in [county] for people who want to hunt, build a cabin or hold it.” For a house: “We buy rentals and houses that need work, and fix or rent them out.”
“Are you going to flip it?”	“We might. We sign as the buyer ‘or assigns’, which means we may pass the contract to a builder or investor for a fee. That doesn’t change your price or your closing, and we tell you so in writing before you sign.”
“I’ll list it with an agent.”	“That’s a good option, and you may get more. What we offer is a fast, certain sale with no commission or showings. If the listing doesn’t work out, can I check back?”
“My brother owns half.”	“Thanks, that helps. Would you both want to sell? Could I talk with him, or would you rather ask him first?” Every owner on title must sign.
“It’s in my late mother’s name.”	“I’m sorry. Has anyone been appointed to handle her estate?” (chapter 5, estates)
“Stop calling me.”	“I will. I’m taking you off our list now.” Log `remove`. Never call that owner again.

6.1 The honest answer to “is this a scam?”

I understand why you’d ask; people get a lot of these calls. We’re the 561 Group. We sign a written purchase agreement, the money goes through a Minnesota title company, and you can have a lawyer or anyone you trust read it before you sign. Nothing is paid by you, and nothing happens until you sign.

6.2 When the owner seems confused

If the owner does not seem to understand what they own, what you are asking, or what a sale would mean, stop selling. Say you would be glad to talk with a family member or their lawyer instead, give your name and number, and log it with a note. The Group does not buy from a person who cannot tell what they are agreeing to. That is the one line the business will not cross.

Chapter 7

Letters

Some owners are reached best by mail: owners whose number you cannot find, owners who do not answer strangers, and owners of rural and lake land, which land investors have always bought by letter. Letters are drafted from the lead list, several parcels at a time (`land-document-draft template=... parcels=...`).

7.1 Two kinds of letter

The neutral letter (`neutral-letter`) asks whether the owner would consider selling, without naming a price. It uses the same words as your voicemail. More owners answer it, commonly 2% to 15% depending on how the list was chosen, but more of them expect a price near full value.

The blind offer (`blind-offer-letter`) names a price: the lead's opening offer, a fifth to a half of the county's value for rural land. Fewer owners answer, commonly 1% to 2%, but an owner who answers has already seen the number and is much closer to signing.

Use the neutral letter for lots and houses, where the price depends on a buyer or a walk-through. Use the blind offer for rural and seasonal land, where the buyer pays by the acre and the county's value is a fair guide.

7.2 Sending a mailing

1. Find the parcels: for example `land-parcels-find market=lake-county kinds=rural-acreage ownerLives=out-of-state limit=200`.
2. Draft the letters: `land-document-draft template=blind-offer-letter market=lake-county parcels=... values.callerName="..." values.callerPhone="..." values.callerEmail="..."`.
3. Print, sign and mail them. Each letter has the owner's mailing address from the county's records.
4. Log each one: `land-contact-log party=owner parcel=... outcome="letter sent"`. The letter tells nothing about interest, but it tells the next caller the owner has seen our name, and it counts in your activity.

7.3 When they answer

Owners who answer a letter call or write you. Treat the call as a seller call that has already opened: confirm they own it, thank them for answering, and go to the questions. If they accept the offer in the letter as written, set the offer call anyway: the acquisitions lead confirms the facts and sends the agreement.

7.4 What a mailing costs and yields

A letter costs about a dollar printed and mailed. At a 1% answer rate, 500 blind offers bring about five owners who have seen the price; if, say, one in three signs, that is one or two contracts. For rural land, where a single fee can be several thousand dollars, the arithmetic works, and the Group measures it with your logged `letter sent` contacts against the contracts that follow.

Chapter 8

From yes to contract

Once you set an offer call, the acquisitions lead takes the deal forward. You should know what happens next, because owners will ask you, and because your share depends on it.

8.1 The stages

Every deal moves through the same stages, and every stage has an office that moves it on and a short list of reasons it can end there. Those reasons are recorded when a deal dies, so the Group can see where deals are lost and fix the procedure there.

stage	means	who moves it on	it ends here when lead	a parcel matched to a buyer, ready to call	you	wrong number, not the owner, owner died and no heir reached, never reached contacted	the owner was reached	you	not interested, remove, keeping it, listed with an agent interested	the owner named a price or asked for an offer	acquisitions lead	asking above the ceiling, no matched buyer, a title problem the owner named, owner stopped answering offered	the Group made an offer	acquisitions lead	offer declined, owner stopped answering, another buyer

stage	means	who moves it on	it ends here when contracted	purchase agreement signed, earnest money deposited	dispositions lead	title failed, due diligence found a defect, seller backed out
marketed	the contract was sent to matched buyers	dispositions lead	no buyer at the assignment price, the contract expired assigned	a buyer signed the assignment and paid its deposit	transaction coordinator	the buyer failed to close, title failed
closed	the title company closed and paid the fee	—	—

8.2 The offer

The acquisitions lead reads the lead and your notes, and calls the owner. The offer comes from two numbers the list already has:

- the opening offer, near half the county's estimate for lots, sites and houses (less for rural land);
- the ceiling, the matched buyer's price less the Group's fee, never above 70% of the county's estimate.

If the owner's asking price is under the ceiling, there is a deal. If it is over, the lead may ask the buyer whether they would pay more, or thank the owner and record the deal as dead with the reason `asking above ceiling`. That reason is data: if many owners in a neighborhood ask above the ceiling, the buyer's price there is too low, and the buy-box call should say so.

8.3 The paperwork

The owner receives two documents, by e-signature or on paper:

1. The disclosure letter (`seller-disclosure-letter`). It says in plain words that the buyer is the Group "or assigns", that the Group may assign the agreement to a builder or investor for a fee paid by that buyer, that the owner's price does not change, that the Group is a buyer and not their agent, and that they may have anyone they trust read the agreement first.

2. The purchase agreement (`purchase-agreement`). Its sections, briefly:
   - the price, paid in cash at closing, with unpaid taxes paid from the seller's proceeds;
   - the earnest money, a few hundred dollars, held by the title company;
   - the closing date, 30 to 60 days out, at a named Minnesota title company;
   - who pays which costs (the buyer pays title and closing; the seller pays deed tax and fixes their own title problems);
   - a due-diligence window in which the buyer may inspect and walk away;
   - that the agreement may be assigned without the seller's consent, for a fee the assignee pays;
   - the residential disclosure, for a house, and the well and septic disclosure;
   - what happens if either side defaults.

For a Wisconsin parcel, a third document goes with them: the wholesaler notice Wisconsin's Act 208 requires (chapter 10).

8.4 Earnest money and title

Within three business days, the Group deposits the earnest money with the title company named in the agreement, and the title company starts its title search. The deal is recorded as `contracted` with the price, the earnest money, the closing date, the title company, and the licensee representing the Group.

8.5 What you tell the owner

If the owner calls you after signing, you can tell them:

- the title company will contact them about closing;
- they do not pay anything before closing;
- if they have questions about the agreement, the acquisitions lead or their own lawyer can answer them.

You do not change terms, and you do not promise anything the agreement does not say.

Chapter 9

From contract to closing

9.1 Marketing the contract, never the land

The Group does not own the property it has under contract. It owns a right to buy it. So the dispositions lead markets that right, the contract, and never advertises the property as if the Group were selling it. Minnesota requires a real estate license to list or advertise someone else's property for sale, and the difference between "our contract to buy this parcel is available" and "lot for sale" is the difference the law draws.

The contract goes first to the buyers whose buy box the parcel fits, on the deal sheet (`contract-deal-sheet`): the parcel, its size and kind, the contract price, the assignment price, the deposit, the closing date and the title company, and one sentence saying plainly that the Group is offering its contract right and does not own the land.

9.2 The assignment

A buyer who wants it signs the assignment (`assignment-of-purchase-agreement`) and pays a non-refundable deposit to the title company within two business days. The assignment says the buyer takes all the Group's rights and duties under the purchase agreement, pays the seller the contract price at closing, and pays the Group the assignment fee. The deal is recorded as `assigned`.

9.3 Closing

The title company closes on the date the purchase agreement sets. At closing:

- the buyer pays the contract price and the assignment fee;
- the title company pays the seller, less the seller's unpaid taxes and costs;
- the title company pays the Group the fee;
- the deed goes from the seller to the buyer.

The fee, and your share of it, are on the closing statement or paid within five business days of the Group receiving the funds. The deal is recorded as `closed`, and the fee counts in `land-activity`.

9.4 When the Group buys outright

Sometimes the Group closes on the property itself and resells it: when a buyer wants the property but cannot close inside the agreement's window, or when a forfeited lot at county auction is cheap enough to hold. That takes the Group's own money, so it is the exception, and your share on a resale is figured from the resale profit after the purchase price, closing costs and holding costs.

9.5 When a deal dies

Deals die, and that is part of the work. Whoever sees it die records it as `dead` with the reason from its stage. The reasons add up in the funnel (chapter 13), where the Group can see whether deals are being lost to price, to title, to buyers, or to owners who stop answering, and change what it does.

Chapter 10

The rules

These are the rules you work under. Some are Minnesota's and Wisconsin's law. Some are the Group's. Each comes with its reason.

10.1 You are a partner in the deal, not an agent

Minnesota law defines a real estate broker as anyone who, for another and for a fee, buys, sells, or negotiates the purchase or sale of real estate, or advertises that they do (Minnesota Statutes 82.55, subdivision 19). Doing that without a license is not allowed.

That is why you are paid as a joint-venture partner in each deal you bring in, under the caller agreement, and not as a commissioned agent negotiating someone else's sale. It is also why the work is divided the way it is:

- You find and qualify owners and buyers, learn what they want, and set offer calls.
- The Group makes every offer, signs every agreement, holds every deposit, and markets its contracts.

So: never quote a firm price, never agree to terms, never sign for the Group, and never describe yourself as representing the owner or the buyer.

10.2 The Group's own licensing line

The same statute presumes that anyone who takes part as principal in five or more real estate transactions in twelve months is in the business of selling real estate, unless a licensed broker or salesperson represents them (subdivision 19, clause g). The Group intends to do far more than five a year, so every contract it signs names the licensed broker or salesperson representing it. The pipeline counts the contracts in the last twelve months so the acquisitions lead always knows where the Group stands. Builders are exempt up to 25 transactions a year (Minnesota Statutes 82.56); the Group, which does not build, is not.

If you hold a Minnesota real estate license yourself, tell the acquisitions lead: the rules for licensees are different, and so is how you can be paid.

10.3 The owner always knows we may assign

Every owner receives the disclosure letter before signing, and the purchase agreement says the Group may assign it for a fee. An owner who does not know they are selling to someone who may assign has not agreed to it.

10.4 Wisconsin

Wisconsin (Superior, across the bridge from Duluth) calls someone who buys under a purchase agreement intending to assign it a real property wholesaler, and requires written notice of that to the seller no later than signing, and to the buyer who takes the assignment (2023 Wisconsin Act 208). A seller who did not get the notice may cancel before closing and keep the deposit. Every Wisconsin deal carries the notice.

10.5 Calling

- Dial by hand, one call at a time, as a person. Minnesota forbids machines that dial and play a recorded message unless the person agreed to it or a live person comes on first, and never before 9 a.m. or after 9 p.m. (Minnesota Statutes 325E.27). We do not use them at all.
- Call between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. in the owner's time zone. Check where they live before you dial.
- Say who you are and why you are calling, truthfully.
- When someone asks to be taken off the list, take them off, log `remove`, and never call them again.
- Offers to buy are not telemarketing. Federal courts have mostly held that a call asking whether an owner will sell, and offering to buy, is not a "telephone solicitation" under the federal telephone law, because that law is about selling things to the person called. That holds only while the call is what it says it is: a genuine offer to buy their property. Never use a seller call to sell the owner anything, and never gather owners' information to pass to anyone else.

10.6 How we treat people

The Group's research into this business found a documented pattern in the wider trade: pressing unsolicited low offers on people in distress, especially elderly homeowners and Black and Brown neighborhoods, which is the reason several cities and states have passed homeowner-protection laws. The Group's answer is to be a business that looks nothing like that, which is also how you earn trust fast on a cold call. The lines:

1. No fraud. Say only what is true, about us, about the process, about the county's records, and about the law.
2. No pressure on a person who cannot tell what they are agreeing to. If an owner seems confused about what they own or what a sale means, stop, offer to speak with family or a lawyer instead, and log it (chapter 6).
3. Prefer the logistical seller. The best leads are owners who live far away, inherited something they do not use, or are done being landlords. Those are the leads the list scores highest, and they are the ones who benefit most from a fast, certain sale.
4. Tell them they can go elsewhere. An owner can always list with an agent, or have a lawyer read our agreement. Say so when it comes up. It costs nothing and it is true.

10.7 Records

Everything you do is logged in the Group's records, under your account: every dial, letter, buy box and note. That is how you are paid, how deals are traced, and how the procedure improves. Keep your notes factual; owners can ask what we have recorded about them, and anything you write should be something you would be comfortable reading to them.

Chapter 11

Working in the metroplex

The 561 Group runs its work in one place: the metroplex, at ops.561.group. It works like an old text game. You sign in as your character, you arrive in the room of your office, and the things your office lets you do are your commands. Everything you do there is recorded under your account.

11.1 Getting in

1. The acquisitions lead gives you an account on ops.561.group and seats you in the Land Caller office. Seating takes two steps, a recognition and an induction, so an office is never held by someone nobody vouched for.
2. Sign in at ops.561.group and open the metroplex.
3. You arrive and report to your office's room. Type `look` to see where you are.

11.2 The commands everyone has command	what it does

`look`	describe the room you are in, who is here, and the way out
`report`	go to your office's room
`powers`	list what your offices let you do, with a line on each
`who`	who else is in the metroplex
`say <words>`	speak to everyone in your room
`tell <name> <words>`	speak to one person
`help`	the command list

11.3 Your powers as a land caller

A power is typed as its name followed by what it needs, as `key=value` pairs. Put quotes around any value with spaces. A value with commas and no quotes is a list.

- See the markets and what each holds by kind: `land-markets`

- Your next calls, callbacks first: `land-call-queue market=duluth kinds=infill-lot limit=20`
- Read one lead before you dial: `land-lead parcel=010-0070-00180`
- Search with any filter: `land-parcels-find market=proctor kinds=dwelling delinquent=true`
- The buyers, recorded and candidates: `land-buyers market=duluth`
- Record a buy box: `land-buy-box-record buyer="DIRT INC" markets=duluth kinds=infill-lot areas="Lakeside,55804" minStandardLots=1 maxPrice=12000 closeDays=30 cash=true sendVia=email`
- Log a call, text or letter: `land-contact-log party=owner parcel=010-0070-00180 outcome="offer call set" askingPrice=9000 callbackAt=2026-10-02T15:00 notes="inherited, never seen it"`
- Draft letters for several parcels at once: `land-document-draft template=neutral-letter parcels=010-0070-00180,010-0890-02470 values.callerName="Your Name" values.callerPhone="218-555-0100"`
- Your numbers since a date: `land-activity since=2026-10-01`

Anything you can type as `key=value` you can also type as JSON, for example `land-lead {"parcel": "010-0070-00180"}`.

11.4 A morning, typed

report land-call-queue market=duluth limit=25
land-lead parcel=010-0070-00180
land-contact-log party=owner parcel=010-0070-00180 outcome=voicemail
land-lead parcel=010-0890-02470
land-contact-log party=owner parcel=010-0890-02470 outcome=interested askingPrice=2 land-contact-log party=owner parcel=010-0890-02470 outcome="offer call set" callbac 10-01T10:00
land-activity since=2026-09-30

11.5 Why the metroplex and not a spreadsheet

A spreadsheet forgets who wrote what and when, and two people editing it lose each other's work. The metroplex records every call as its own entry, stamped with your account and the time, so your share of every deal is on the record, nobody overwrites anybody, and the lead list always reflects every call anyone has made.

Chapter 12

Your day and your week

12.1 Work to actions, not to goals

Sales goals make people cut corners. The Group plans your work as actions: the specific things you do each day, in order, with the tools in chapter 11. If you do the actions, the numbers follow, and when they do not, the actions are what we change, together. A lost deal is information about the procedure, not a mark against you.

12.2 The day

1. Buyers first (30 minutes). Five to ten buyer calls a day until your market has twenty recorded buy boxes, then one or two a day to keep them current.
2. Callbacks due (as long as they take). `land-call-queue` puts them first. A promised callback is the most valuable call on the list.
3. Seller calls in two blocks. 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 4 to 7 p.m. in the owner's time zone, when people answer. Aim for 60 to 100 dials a day if you are part-time, 100 to 150 if full-time.
4. Log every dial as you make it. Not at the end of the day.
5. Hand off the same day. Every `interested` and `offer call set` is on the pipeline for the acquisitions lead the moment you log it; add a note with anything they need.
6. Letters (once a week). Draft and send the week's neutral letters and blind offers, and log them as `letter sent`.

12.3 The week

Once a week, read your numbers (`land-activity since=<last week>`) with the acquisitions lead:

- dials, letters, conversations, and interested owners, by day;
- the funnel: how many leads reached each stage, and the rate from each stage to the next;
- the reasons deals died, by stage.

Then decide one thing to change. If owners say `not interested` far more than usual, change the list (a different market, kind or score). If owners are interested but deals die at `asking above ceiling`, call the buyers about their prices. If conversations are low, check the numbers you are dialing. Write the change down in the notes of the week's review, so the next edition of this book can include what worked.

12.4 Your first two weeks

- Day 1: read chapters 1 to 6 and 10. Get your account and seat. Type `powers` and `land-markets`.
- Days 2 and 3: buyer calls only, until you have recorded five buy boxes.
- Days 4 to 10: seller calls on matched leads, with a daily review of your log against the scripts.
- Days 11 to 14: your first mailing, and your first weekly review.

Chapter 13

The numbers

13.1 What a deal pays

kind	a typical fee	why
a single infill lot	$2,000 to $10,000	builders pay a few thousand over the contract price for a lot that fits several lots or a site	more, often much more	the land is worth more and the builder’s search cost is larger rural or seasonal land	a few thousand to tens of thousands	offers open at a fifth to a half of value; buyers pay more
a house	several thousand to $20,000 or more	investors pay for houses that fit their rental or renovation plans

Across the trade, a surveyed average assignment fee is about $13,000, with a range from $2,500 to over $40,000; Duluth lots sit at the low end of that range and houses and sites at the high end. Your agreement names your share; the examples in this book use 40%.

13.2 What calling yields

These figures come from firms that sell calling services, so the Group treats them as ranges to test against your own numbers, not as promises.

- On a good list, about one dial in ten reaches a person.
- About one in twelve of those conversations becomes a qualified lead: an owner with a number and a reason.
- Three to eight percent of qualified leads sign.

- Put together: one signed contract for every 800 to 1,500 dials.

Lists matched to a buyer's buy box, which is what your call queue gives you, are the good-list case. Old or unmatched lists take several times as many dials.

13.3 What that means for you

At 100 dials a day, a contract comes every 8 to 15 working days: one and a half to two and a half a month. At a $4,000 fee and a 40% share, that is $1,600 a deal, or about $2,400 to $4,000 a month. Letters add to that without adding dials. Houses and sites raise the fee per deal.

These are arithmetic from the trade's averages, not a promise. Your own numbers, in `land-activity`, are the only ones that count, and after a month you will have enough of them to plan with.

13.4 Reading your funnel

The funnel (`land-activity`, `land-pipeline`) shows how many deals reached each stage and the share of each stage that went on to the next. Read it from the top.

- Few conversations per dial: the numbers are bad or the times are wrong.
- Few interested per conversation: the list or the opening is wrong.
- Many interested, few offered: asking prices are above the ceiling, or there is no matched buyer. Call buyers.
- Many offered, few contracted: the offers are too low for these owners, or the offer call comes too late. Tell the acquisitions lead.
- Contracted but not assigned: the buyers' boxes are stale.

The reasons deals died, by stage, are listed under the funnel. They are the most useful numbers the Group has.

Chapter 14

Second lines of work

14.1 County auctions

Since July 2024, every Minnesota county must sell every tax-forfeited parcel at a public auction, usually online, within six months, with at least 30 days' published notice. The minimum bid is the unpaid taxes and costs. In St. Louis County alone, thousands of parcels are forfeited land.

For the Group, the auction lists are supply. The acquisitions lead matches each auction's parcels against the buy boxes, and tells matched buyers what is coming up. When a parcel is cheap and a buyer wants it, the Group may bid and resell. The lead list shows these parcels as kind `forfeited`, and you never call anyone about them.

14.2 Unclaimed surplus

When a forfeited parcel sells at auction for more than the taxes and costs, the extra, the surplus, belongs to the former owner and anyone else with an interest in the property. The county must mail them notice and a claim form, send a second notice, and post the sale on its website. They have six months from the first notice to claim; after that the county keeps the money.

Many former owners never claim, most often because they died and their heirs do not know. Finding those heirs is the work of the Group's heir search business. If you learn on a call that a property the family lost to forfeiture sold at auction, tell the acquisitions lead: there may be money waiting for the family, and the heir search business can help them find and claim it.

14.3 Estates

Hundreds of the parcels on the lists are held by estates, heirs or trusts. Some are simple: a trustee or personal representative who can sign. Some are not: an owner who died years ago, no estate ever opened, and a family who each own a fraction without knowing it. Those parcels cannot be sold until someone reconstructs the family's chain of title and a court or the family settles who can sign.

That reconstruction is the heir search business's product, sold to the family's attorney, the title company, or the nonprofits and programs that pay for it. When you log `heir search` in a note, the acquisitions lead looks at whether the family would be helped by it. When the title is cleared, the land can come back to our pipeline, with the family choosing whether to sell.

Glossary

Absentee owner. An owner who does not live on or near the property, seen in the county's records as a mailing address elsewhere.

Assignment. Transferring our rights under a purchase agreement to another buyer before closing. The document is the assignment of purchase agreement.

Assignment fee. What the new buyer pays the Group for the assignment: the assignment price less the contract price. Paid at closing.

Blind offer. A letter offering a stated price to an owner we have not spoken with.

Buy box. A buyer's standing description of what they buy: markets, kinds, areas, size, top price, speed, and how to send them a deal.

Closing. The day the title company takes the money, pays everyone, and records the deed.

Contract assignment. The business: putting property under an assignable purchase agreement and assigning it for a fee. The trade calls it wholesaling.

Deal sheet. The page that offers our contract, not the land, to matched buyers.

Due diligence. The window after signing in which the buyer may inspect the property and walk away.

Earnest money. The deposit the buyer places with the title company when the agreement is signed, credited at closing.

Equitable interest. The buyer's right, under a signed purchase agreement, to buy the property on its terms. It is what we assign.

Forfeiture. The state taking title to property whose taxes went unpaid through the redemption period. Minnesota then auctions it.

Funnel. How many deals reached each stage, and the share that went on.

Heir search. Reconstructing a family's chain of title and heirs so an estate's property can be sold or cleared; the Group's sister business.

Infill lot. Vacant residential land in a city, big enough to build on.

Kind. The kind of property a parcel is: infill lot, underbuilt site, seasonal, rural acreage, house, or forfeited.

Market. A place the business works, read from one county's parcel records: Duluth, Hermantown, Proctor, the Iron Range cities, St. Louis County's towns, Lake, Itasca, Crow Wing, Cass and Aitkin counties, Minneapolis, Saint Paul.

Metroplex. The Group's operations world at ops.561.group, where your office gives you your commands.

Neutral letter. A letter asking whether an owner would sell, with no price.

Offer ceiling. The most the Group will offer: the matched buyer's price less the fee, never above the county-estimate ceiling for the kind.

Personal representative. The person a court appoints to handle a dead person's estate, who signs for it.

Purchase agreement. The contract in which the owner agrees to sell and the Group, "or assigns", agrees to buy.

Real estate broker. In Minnesota, anyone who for another and for a fee buys, sells or negotiates real estate, and anyone presumed in the business after five transactions a year without a licensee representing them.

Real property wholesaler. Wisconsin's name for a buyer who intends to assign; they must give written notice.

Stage. Where a deal is: lead, contacted, interested, offered, contracted, marketed, assigned, closed, or dead.

Surplus. What a forfeited property's auction brings above the taxes and costs, which the former owner may claim.

Title company. The neutral company that searches title, holds deposits and closes the sale.

Underbuilt site. Commercial or industrial land whose buildings are worth little against the land.

Appendix: the call sheet

Seller call, on one page

1. “Hi, is this [first name]? This is [your name] with the 561 Group. I’m calling about your property in [place], the [lot / land / house] at [where]. Do you still own that?”
2. “We buy property there directly from owners. Would you consider an offer? We close at a local title company, no agent, no commission.”
3. How did you come to own it? Have you seen it lately? Anything I should know? Anyone else on title? “If we could close in 30 to 60 days, what number would make this worth doing?”
4. Repeat their number back. “I’ll pass this to our offer lead. [Day] or [day]?”
5. Log it.
